National Organization for Zonal Affairs

The tasks of the Academic branches abroad

Building and strengthening the capacities of workers in state agencies, the public, private and mixed sectors, and civil society organizations .Promoting the concepts of management information systems and information culture. Furthermore, the application of quality management systems in accordance with the national standard specifications. Also preparation and providing qualification for the leaders of all managerial levels.
 -Expanding the activities of the Academy at the regional and governorate levels.
 -Developing scientific research methodology in the fields of administrative development and information technology.
 -Strengthening the bonds of cooperation with public and private universities, and providing technical advice in the administrative and information technology fields, in order to raise the efficiency of institutional performance.

Strategic orientations and objectives

The Academy is keen to update the strategy to upgrade management to keep pace with scientific developments in the fields of administrative development and information technology. The strategic orientations are to provide institutions with an efficient and effective administrative cadre that contributes to supporting the government program set by the government and thus preparing the appropriate ground for the government to exercise its powers and manage its resources to achieve the requirements of comprehensive development.
The objectives are as follows: Raising the efficiency of the government's administrative apparatus, providing efficient and effective administrative leaderships in promoting and implementing e-governance.
- Expanding software development.

Consultancy and management development

The Academy provides administrative consultations and undertakes the conduct of research in all branches of business and public administration and for various organizations in cooperation with the concerned. British universities and institutions of all kinds, specialized and designed for special purposes for some institutions and individuals and for all administrative levels. Also providing educational and training opportunities, especially the English language, business administration and electronic computers, to obtain diplomas, masters and PhD degrees.

Manchester International Academy

UK learners' services for undergraduate and postgraduate studies

The Academy is providing the necessary assistance to students studying in the undergraduate studies in certain specializations and for postgraduate studies (diploma, masters and doctoral degrees) in all scientific and humanitarian specializations in British universities and institutes.
In addition to assisting students in writing, preparing and checking reports; research and in various scientific and humanitarian specializations in a high academic manner and according to the standards of British higher education.
The Academy also contributes to assisting students in their first steps in the path of scientific research by providing:

Courses of scientific research methods

The Academy aims to develop the skills of graduate students (masters and doctoral degrees) and train them to use scientific research methods in both practical and theoretical fields. The tailored curriculum for graduate, undergraduate students and teachers from different academic backgrounds contributes to the development of different aspects of their scientific and practical life. Education in these courses can be provided remotely using electronic communication platforms such as Zoom and others.

Educational support service

The Academy provides full scientific support to students wishing to complete undergraduate or postgraduate studies (masters and doctoral degrees) in British universities, moreover to investigating and revising reports, articles and graduation research from the early stages of writing planning until the final stage in submitting the essay and research or thesis in response to the remarks and recommendations of the supervisor and the scientific committee and up to the final result and obtaining the first or higher degree.

Academy goals

Providing advisory, training and research services in the administrative and information technology fields for the public and private sectors and civil society organizations. The Academy provides education and training opportunities at all levels and scientific fields within the United Kingdom and abroad. The Academy is also committed to developing and updating teaching and training programs and curricula according to the needs of the user.

Academy achievements

 •Providing continuing education programs for learners remotely or in attendance at the site of the academy or work site.
 •Scientific partnership with the prestigious NOZA Educational Foundation.
 •Scientific partnership with many British universities and training institutes inside and outside the United Kingdom.
 •Authentication of academic certificates by the British Foreign Office and by all embassies in London.
 •Preparing educational and training packages in all branches of science and knowledge.

Methods of education and training

 •Distance study via the Internet and various e-learning methods.
 •Individual education and professional training (private lessons) at the site of the Academy and its branches - or in the appropriate place specified by the CPD learner.
 •Professional development courses • Practical training.
 • Home training • Courses specifically designed for the learner and specialized courses in various fields.

Certificates

 •Continuing Education Certificate • Diploma • Professional Diploma • Training Certificate.